PRICE TWO CENTS

CITY COUNCIL

Regular Routine of Business Transacted at Special Session.

The City Council met in special session Friday evening with all the members present.

The minutes of the regular and special meetings of the last two weeks read and approved.

The following claims were presented and allowed:

Samuel Nicholson, garbage	$60.00
Henry Wooley, labor	11.40
Henry Alfie, labor	11.55
Ira McConnell, labor	18.00
Isaac Burrell, street com'sr	21.00
Wm. Aufenberg, labor	11.40
Edw. Scherick, assist'g city eng.	4.00
Seymour Home Telephone Co.	4.50
Volunteer firemen	12.00
Democratic Sun, printing, etc.	13.00
Engineer Record, notices	8.80
Postage	1.00
W. H. Reynolds, broom	.50
Prisoners	3.35
Mrs. Constance, clean. city bldg.	6.00
W. Burdall, repairing pump	1.00
Central Pharmaceutical Co.	8.00
J. Fetting Co., harness, etc.	38.80
Warren Hall, rent for barn	1.50
Seymour Mfg. Co., gradestakes	1.50

The councilmen entered into some discussion regarding the allowing of the claim of the Central Pharmaceutical Co., presented by Dr. Kamman, for antitoxin. According to the law as read, they decided to allow the claim.

W. R. Day presented a resolution to put in brick or concrete sidewalks on Brown street west of the Pennsylvania railroad tracks. He stated the sidewalks west of Lynn street on the north side of the street were in bad condition. Councilmen Mills and Misch said that they did not believe that in making improvements in sidewalks brick should be used, and the council should order concrete, to be laid according to instructions of civil engineers.

Upon motion of Misch the resolution was referred to the board of public works.

Councilman Hodapp stated the I. C. & S. interurban line had not constructed walks along Blish street between Eighth and Ninth as ordered by the council some time ago. He also said that the track had never been boarded at the Blish street crossing and moved that the city clerk notify the company to make the improvements at once.

Motion was carried.

Mills stated that according to the ordinance of the two interurban lines coming into the city, they were to leave the sidewalks in as good repair as they found them, when setting their telephone and trolley poles. He said this had not been done, and moved that the city clerk notify the two companies to fill in with concrete around the poles set on the sidewalks. Carried.

Upon the call for the second reading of ordinances Davison moved that the license ordinance be postponed until next meeting. He said that one ordinance provided that traveling physicians should be charged a license fee of $50 per day, which made it prohibitory for physicians to engage in practice here unless citizens of Seymour. He stated that there should be a reasonable license, but that he was opposed to making it so heavy.

In regard to the sewer on Vine street the civil engineer stated that he had made a preliminary survey but could not make his final report until he had made a closer survey. Davison offered his services to the engineer to assist in making the survey, and the work will be done Monday.

Misch Moved that J. H. Hopewell be given permission to tap the sewer near his home on West Fourth street. Carried.

Misch asked concerning the routes for the night policemen, and was informed that one should be on north side and one on the south side of the B. & O. S-W. tracks. It seems, however, that they go together, and were requested to appear before the board of public works. The workmen in the street department were also instructed to be present at that meeting.

Misch submitted a communication from W. A. Carter of the Carter Glove and Mitten Factory asking for use of the automobile factory for his glove factory which he would move here. Mr. Carter proposed to carry insurance in favor of the city, if the building could be had free of rent. He was present and made an explanation of what his factory did.

Upon motion of W. R. Day communication was referred to board of public works.

Upon motion of Tasker the engineer was instructed to open a ditch in the alley between Bruce and Tipton streets.

W. R. Day stated that the ditches in the Fifth ward were in bad condition and moved that street commissioner clean up as soon as possible. Carried. Sherman Day said that some of the property owners in block 19, Butler's addition, were objecting to the opening of the alley as staked out by city engineer and moved that Marshal inform such owners to permit the work to be done as ordered. Carried.

In regard to the matter of disposing of the transmitter formerly in the old telephone exchange, city clerk read a communication from the town Board of Brownstown referring him to D. B. Vance, president of the Water, Light and Traction Co. The council indicated that they would sell the transmitter for $100, one-half its original cost.

Sherman Day suggested that the streets be graded before the ground becomes too dry. He was in favor of securing a traction engine to do the work, stating that it was cheaper than when done by teams. Misch said he did not believe a traction engine could get under some of the shade trees. No action was taken upon the matter.

The bids for the street work were opened and read and referred to the board of public works. John R. Thompson proposed to do the work for $28.50 and Erwin Carr for $30.

The city attorney reported that it was the duty of the board of health to appoint the sanitary inspector.

Upon motion of Misch council adjourned.

ANOTHER FACTORY

Wants to Locate in Seymour in Automobile Building.

W. A. Carter, proprietor of the Carter Glove and Mitten Factory now located in North Vernon, has made a proposition to the city council to move his factory to this city. Mr. Carter states that he will have his factory in operation in this city within one month if the council will grant him the use of the automobile building, free of rent for a period of five years.

The communication which was read in council meeting Friday evening is as follows:

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of Seymour, Ind:

I have a factory in North Vernon consisting of twenty power machines, large power cutter, a twelve-horse power gasoline engine, glove turners, dies for cutting forty to fifty different sizes and styles of canvas gloves and mittens and all other equipment required in a first class glove and mitten factory, employing about thirty people, which I would like to move to Seymour and have the following proposition to offer:

Will move here and have the factory in operation within one month provided you grant me free use of the automobile building for a term of five years. I carry insurance on the building in favor of the city.

Respectfully, submitted,
W. A. CARTER,
Proprietor of the Carter Glove and Mitten Factory.

The glove and mitten factory, which is now located in North Vernon, was purchased by Mr. Carter about a year ago. Since he took charge he has done an excellent business, having manufactured many thousands of pairs of gloves and mittens, for which he finds a ready market. The reason for moving the factory is that sufficient help cannot be secured in that city to keep the plant running to its full capacity.

Mr. Carter was present at the meeting of the council Friday night and stated that he employed about thirty people, most of whom were girls and women. He thought that he would have no difficulty in securing all the employees he needed in this city. He said that their wages would depend entirely upon the amount of work they could do as a piece work schedule was adopted. Some of the girls could make from $8 to $12 per week, while others would not average over $6. The employees received the same rate of pay that was given in the large factories of this character.

Mr. Carter stated that he may not want the building the entire time, as he was contemplating erecting a building on East Second street, and if this was done, provision would be made for the accommodation of the factory there.

It is understood that several other cities have communicated with Mr. Carter concerning the removal of the plant, but he is desirous of locating here, as this is his home city and he has other business interests here. The proposition will be taken up at the meeting of the board of public works next Friday evening.

RESIGNS POSITION

Z. T. Sweeney, Fish and Game Commissioner, Files Resignation.

Upon good authority, it is stated that Z. T. Sweeney, of Columbus, has resigned his position as State Fish and Game Commissioner. He is well known here, having lectured in Seymour a number of times.

Regarding his work, the Columbus Republican says:

"Mr. Sweeney took the office of Commissioner of Fisheries and Game in 1897 at the special request of the late Governor Mount. He took it when the salary was only $25 per month, and worked for several years, paying large amounts in excess of the salaries and expenses. Nearly all of the progressive legislation has been accomplished during his administration, and the office now is receiving and paying out about $60,000 per annum. Indiana stands as one of the foremost states in progressive legislation on fisheries, game and birds, and a number of states are modeling their legislation after Indiana's laws. Mr. Sweeney is frequently called upon to write reports for the United States Government and for the large sporting weekly and monthly magazines, such as The National Sportsman, Recreation, The American Angler, Forest and Stream, and a host of other similar periodicals. When he first took the office he carried it in addition to his other work as a minister, lecturer and writer, but the office has assumed such proportions that it requires the entire time of the commissioner, and Mr. Sweeney feels that he cannot sacrifice his life pursuits on the altar of the office, and he surrenders it to some one who can devote his entire time to the work."

It is said that George Schwartzkopf, of Columbus, is to be appointed to the position by Governor Marshall. Mr. Schwartzkopf has been making a canvas for the place ever since the State went Democratic at the last election. He has been recommended by some extremely influential people, and it is said stands high in the Governor's estimation. Another effort in his behalf was made at Indianapolis this week, when the Democrats of the Fourth District met for organization before the first session of the State convention. Schwartzkopf's name was mentioned before the district meeting and he was endorsed by the entire district for Fish and Game Commissioner.

Graduates Tape Pleasure Trip.
Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hurdock, of the L. & T. Traction Company, gave an excursion to the Forestry Reservation at Henryville this afternoon for the graduating class of the Seymour High School, the teachers of the Shields building and the members of the school board. They went down in a special car, leaving here about 2:30. Miss Frances Hurdock is one of the members of the graduating class and it is in her honor that the excursion was planned. The special will return here later in the afternoon or in the early evening.

DIED.

SAVAGE—John Savage died early Saturday morning at his home about four miles southeast of this city, near Jaketown, after an extended illness with heart trouble and other complications. Age, about thirty years. He was the son of the late Charles Savage, who resided near Jaketown for many years and who died about six years ago. The deceased was married and leaves a mother, Mrs. Catherine Savage, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Davis, who also resides with her mother, and Mrs. George Bennett, of Columbus.

LEAVE WASHINGTON.

Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Offices Moved to Flora, Illinois.

The offices of Division Superintendent Joseph Donahue, also the train dispatcher's office and the headquarters of the road foreman of engines are being moved from Washington to Flora, Ill. It has been expected ever since the offices of the Indiana division were moved from Washington to Seymour that the offices of the Illinois division would be moved somewhere west of Washington.

The offices have mostly been moved this week, with the exception of Superintendent Donahue's office, which, it is expected, will be moved about the first of the month. The new order takes several more prominent families away from Washington.

Arm Broken.

Joseph Pferrer, the little grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Niemeyer, fell and broke his arm Thursday while at play. The left arm was broken near the elbow and the fracture is said to be pretty serious.

Entertained.

Miss Kate Andrews, principal of the Seymour High School, very delightfully entertained Friday evening for the members of the Senior Class, the high school teachers and school board.

A double-head special went south on the Pennsylvania line this morning.

CONVENTION ADJOURNS

John Congdon Delegate to Meeting of K. and L. of S. Councils of Indiana.

John Congdon has returned from Brazil where he was a delegate to the bi-annual convention of the Knights and Ladies of Security Councils of Indiana.

The convention was presided over by Delegate T. S. Payton, of New Albany, and Delegate R. C. Baltzell, of Princeton was secretary. The only business before the convention was the election of two delegates to represent the lodges of Indiana at the National convention of the order which will be held at Springfield, Ill., in June.

John T. Roberts, of Brazil, and John Lovell, of Indianapolis, were the successful candidates for representatives to the National convention and T. S. Payton, of New Albany and R. C. Baltzell, of Princeton, were chosen alternate representatives.

PAY ROLLS RETURNED

For Revision, With Increase of Six Per Cent. All Around.

Heads of the various departments of the B. & O. S-W., in this city were notified yesterday that the pay rolls for April which had been forwarded to Baltimore were being returned without any money for correction. They were instructed to make out new rolls adding 6 per cent. to the wages and salaries of all employees and officials receiving less than $200 per month. The order excepts those employees who are affected by the agreements recently arrived at with the engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, yardmen and telegraphers. Apart from these all departments are given the benefit of the advance and over the whole system it is said about 55,000 men will be affected.

CURE FOR HIGH PRICES.

Return to the Thrifty Habits of Our Forefathers the Remedy.

It is not surprising to see Bradstreet's index number of commodity prices reaching the unprecedented figure of 9,231.0 on Jan. 1. This easily surpasses the previous record of 9,129.3 of March 1, 1907. The advance in the 96 commodities represented has been fairly uniform, and the most serious problem before the world at present is strikingly emphasized. Practically any index number, here or abroad, would make a similar showing, and congress when it investigates high prices will probably be surprised to find at the outset that the condition is world-wide, the Wall Street Journal says.

Nothing would ever convince the grower of wheat or cotton that the particular commodity he has to sell could be too high. No doubt he bombards his congressman with letters about the high prices of the things he has to buy. The class is one not deeply versed in economics, and it is in the rural districts that the belief is most firmly held that government is a sort of vague entity possessing boundless wealth and power derived from some mysterious source other than the people themselves.

It is to the interest of our politicians to persuade people that most of the evils they suffer from can be cured by legislation. It would never do to tell the farmer the truth—that he and not the legislature possesses the remedy for most of the evils from which he suffers. Probably the politician does not know any better. The representatives of a people are not ordinarily very much wiser than the people they represent.

Commodities do not advance forever. High and low prices have their cycles. Cotton at 16 cents is followed by a greatly increased acreage which brings the price down automatically. But there is one way in which the high price of commodities can be fought here and now. When President Ripley of the Atchison blames it all on the women, he is neither gallant nor just. But there is no doubt that domestic expenditure can be enormously curtailed. Our waste leaves us a margin which could be used to bring down the price of all commodities. What we need is a return to the thrifty habits of our forefathers.

The meat strike, if it does nothing else, will at least teach a great many people how much it is possible to do without, and that without seriously reducing the standard of comfort. Everybody would be a great deal better and healthier if he confined his consumption of meat to one meal a day. This would automatically reduce prices.

No one can say that the index numbers representing commodity prices have reached their zenith, but it is not difficult to prove that the first steps to a reduction lies in the practice of individual economy.

BREAD, "THE STAFF OF LIFE."

Many Cereals Have Proven Their Value as Human Food for Ages.

According to modern analysis, as well as to well-founded traditional knowledge, there is an amplitude of potent and strength-giving factors in oats, corn, wheat, rice and other varieties of the grainiferous products to warrant their use as a mainstay and staple of food. Bread has been for centuries recognized in the telling popular phrase as "the staff of life," and popular phrases are usually founded on sound experience, the Philadelphia Telegraph says. Going back to the roots of the language, our word "lord" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon words "loaf-ward"—the loaf keeper or dispenser, who was of course an important feudal figure. The Roman mob cried "panem et circenses"—for grain and pleasure. Despite the strictures of dyspeptic Carlyle, the Scotch with their oat cakes and oatmeal porridge are a robust race. The Chinese have for centuries flourished on a fare of rice; the aboriginal Americans had maize as their chief food; the southern Latin people partake mainly of spaghetti and the northern peasantry, eat their bread made of various grains.

And so examples might be multiplied indefinitely to attest the value of cereals in the human economy. At this time cereals are to be obtained in many varied and palatable forms. As manufactured there is an infinite variety of them which might beneficially be turned to account in the daily regimen. The objection may be urged that immediately this is done the new demand will cause a rise in prices, but such reasoning would be fallacious in view of the two-fold fact that the manufacturers of cereals have conducted in their interest a campaign, the feature of which is a fixed price for cereals and that the supply is too ample with our yearly "bumper crops."

INSECTS THAT TIPPLE.

Flowers Make Bacchanalian Festival for Various Flies and Moths.

It is not very obvious, from the human point of view, why the ivy should be called the plant of Bacchus, since no wine is made from its berries. Entomologists, however, have found that its flowers make a veritable Bacchanalian festival for a number of insects, says the Little Rock Gazette.

They are wont to sally forth at night with lanterns to capture the intoxicated moths that crowd around the greenish blossoms. When the willow is in bloom they find a similar scene of dissipation around its yellow catkins.

The tippling insect may be used to point a moral by the temperance lecturer, for rum not infrequently leads to its ruin. A distinguished entomologist, after giving a recipe for the mixture of sugaring trees for moths, which included beer, said: "And some Jamaica rum just before using; it is the rum which attracts them." After sipping this mixture the moths and butterflies fall from the tree intoxicated. If the entomologist is not there to capture them by and by they recover and get up again for another dip.

There is a fly so addicted to wine that Linnaeus named it the cellar fly, which appellation Kirby changed to the more appropriate one of the cellar wine drinker. The latter distinguished entomologist writes of it thus: "The larva of this little fly, as I can witness from my own observations, disdain to feed on anything but wine or beer, which, like Boniface in the play, it may be said both to eat and drink, though, unlike its toping counterpart, it is indifferent to the age of liquor, which, whether sweet or sour, is equally acceptable."

There is another insect—a moth—which also loves the cellar and the wine bottle. But, strange to say, it takes its liquor merely as a flavoring to the cork in the bottle, on which it really feeds, that is to say, the larva pasture on the corks of wine bottles, sometimes causing the wine to run out. The moth belongs to that troublesome family which works such destruction in clothes and furs.

FOUND GIRL IN PICTURE.

Ohio Man Recognizes Sweetheart and Traces Her to Paris.

Portrayal of his former sweetheart on a moving picture film awakened the love slumbering in the breast of Isadore Mendel and a proposal of marriage is now in the mails destined for Europe. The remarkable romance, for the successful culmination of which Mendel is hopeful, began at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, when he fell in love with Teckla Perlinger.

Both were 18. To escape military duty the youth came to America six years ago and never heard from the girl again. A few months ago Mendel was astounded to see her depicted in pictures at a local theater as a nurse in charge of a group of Paris children. To the film company at Paris and the United States consular office the young man wrote letters begging that they might furnish information to enable him to get into communication with the original of the photographs. Recently he received a reply verifying his identification and giving Teckla's address.

She is, the letter stated, employed in the French capital as a nurse, and was pleased to hear that he was inquiring for her. Mendel immediately sent a missive of love and proposal. He is a cigarmaker and resides at 1113 East 5th street, Dayton, the New York Herald says.

For the Heathen Only.

A collection was being taken up in a Scotch church one Sunday on behalf of the heathen. The minister made a stirring appeal, and the warden started his round with the box. One of the first members of the congregation to whom he offered it, says a writer in the Church Family Newspaper, was evidently ill-disposed to the cause.

In a stage whisper, heard alike by congregation and pastor, this man said in blank vernacular: "Tak it awa, lad. I'm not going to give owt." At that period the collection boxes were taken direct into the vestry. Down came the preacher from the pulpit, went into the vestry, brought out one of the boxes, and marched straight toward the gentleman, all the congregation imagining that the minister was going to shame the unbeliever into giving something.

The clergyman offered the box to the heretic with the naive remark: "Tak what thou wantest, lad; it has been gathered for the heathen!"

A Curious Stone.

A curious stone is the alexandrite. It is a dark green stone that is polished, cut and set, very like a fine topaz or amethyst, in large, showy rings surrounded by diamonds. By the light of day the alexandrite has no special beauty save its fine luster, but directly a shaft of artificial light strikes the dull stone deep gleams of red flash out of the green, and under the gas or in the frelight one ignorant of this vagary would instantly pronounce it a ruby.

Keeping Up Appearances.

Husband (suddenly waking up at dead of night)—What in the world was that noise?

Wife (calmly)—It's all right, dear. The guests of the Moneybags' ball are just coming home, and I slipped down and gave our front door a slam, so the neighbors would think we were there.—New York Journal.

Mrs. Crimmonbeak—Why, a department store is a place a man can get anything he wants.

Mr. Crimmonbeak—Yes, and where a woman can get a great many things she never will want.—Yonkers Statesman.

Making a Collection.

"Why do you clip and hoard these old witticisms?"

"Oh, I have that saving sense of humor you read so much about."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The sermon never seems long to the woman wearing a new hat to church.

RELIGIOUS

The Answered Prayer.

On Carmel's height, a strong man bowed in prayer; Helpless apart from God, in prayer he bowed— To plead that rain might cool the stifling air, And moistening mists the parched land enshroud.

He once before had prayed—for this same drought, And God had heard! Three years and more nor rain Nor dew had fallen—so, unweary by doubt, And earnestly, Elijah prays again!

Strong in his faith, expectant, oft he sent His servant seaward, for some welcome sign; Nothing he saw, and yet again he went— Nothing, ah! nothing from the Hand Divine.

God's hour had struck—at last was something found. A little something, just a fleecy cloud; But faith, beholding, hears again the sound Of rain abundant and of tempest loud.

God serves us even so—each one who prays: "Nothing, ah, nothing!" is our weary cry. No answer to our prayer for nights and days, In vain we scan the still unchanging sky.

Then suddenly appears a sign from God; Something is given which may be only small, Yet this should send us running on the road To do our part—God's cloud enfolds it all!—Winifred A. Iverson.

Only a Nickel.

Sunday, he wore a rose on the lapel of his coat, and when the plate was passed he gave a nickel to the Lord. He had several bills in his pocket and sundry change, perhaps a dollar's worth; but he hunted about, and, finding the poor little nickel, he laid it on the plate to aid the church militant in its fight against the world, the flesh and the devil.

His silk hat was beneath the seat, and the gloves and cane were beside it, and the nickel was on the plate—a whole nickel.

On Saturday afternoon he had a gin rickey at the hotel, and his friend had a fancy drink, and the cash register stamped twenty-five cents on a slip the boy presented to him. Peeling off a bill, he handed it to the lad, and gave him a nickel tip when he brought back the change.

A nickel for the Lord and a nickel for the waiter!

And the man had his shoes polished on Saturday afternoon and handed out a dime without a murmur. He had a shave, and paid fifteen cents with equal alacrity. He took a box of candies home to his wife, and paid forty cents for them, and the box was tied with a dainty bit of ribbon.

Yes, he gave a nickel to the Lord! Who is the Lord?

Who is He? Why the man worships Him as Creator of the universe, the one who puts the stars in order and by whose immutable decree the heavens stand.

Yes, he does and he dropped a nickel in to support the church militant. And what is the church militant? The church militant is the body that represents upon the earth the great God the man gave the nickel to.

And the man knew that he was but an atom in space, and that the Almighty was without limitations, yet, knowing this, he put his hand in his pocket and picked out a nickel and gave it to the Lord.

And the Lord being gracious and slow to anger, and knowing our frame did not slay the man for the meanness of his offering, but gives him this day his daily bread.

But the nickel was ashamed, if the man wasn't.

The nickel hid beneath a quarter that was given by a poor woman who washed for a living.—Stanford Herald.

Strength Through Prayer.

A tree without roots, and a Christian who never prays in secret, are fitting types of each other. Prayer is the most wonderful fact in the universe. It is the highest and supremest privilege of a human being. As our view of the Almighty is enlarged by new discoveries of the marvels of physical science, this privilege of vital relation between our helplessness and His might should become more and more dear to us. In ourselves we are infinitely little, but as we take hold upon God, infinite love, strength and joy are ours through believing prayer.

In His Leading.

God's leading is not intended to exempt us from the duty of initiation. Paul did not wait to be shown, in some miraculous way, what his duty was. He went straight forward in the line of the great purpose of his life, trusting God to arrest him or to divert him. Such indications of duty as the vision of the man of Macedonia were exceptional. The normal course of the apostle's life shows us a man moving forward steadily along the line which his judgment and conscience approve, believing, with all his soul, that he was going in God's way for him, and confident that God would check him or make his way plain if in aught he erred. To all who do this, God plainly speaks, "I am the Lord thy God which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldst go."

Helpful Living.

A Christian life cannot be lived in a corner. If Christ is in us, He cannot be hid. The world must see and know that we are Christ's. Our light must shine, and our power be felt. And we must make it clear that our religion is one of helpfulness. Help was laid on One Who was mighty to save when our salvation was laid on Christ; and the pitiful cry of the heavy-laden to Him was "Lord, help us." Men need help now. Involved in sin, tangled in the meshes of worldliness, taken captive by Satan at his will, they want the helping hand of a brother for their rescue. It is our great privilege to "bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

A MAN WORTH HELPING.

The true story of Mike Halloran, optimist, is worth reading and considering. He had lost his sight in a factory where parls green got into his eyes. That was fourteen years ago, says a writer in the World's Work, and ever since he had supported himself by carting ashes. He was not a contractor, but a day laborer, and no one helped him in his sightless task except a small lad, who led the horse. A reporter who had learned these surprising facts questioned Mike further.

"They calls me 'Happy Mike Halloran,' owin' to me mindin' me own affairs an' keepin' a cheery look to the world," he went on, with a bit of a sigh; "but I feels it pretty sober inside o' me whin I be lookin' the gayest."

"How much work can you do in a day, Halloran, as compared with a man who can see?"

"As much as any o' them an' more'n many, sor. I can handle six to tin loads a day, accordin' to the len'th o' the trip. I'll be after havin' 'em shorter when the new docks be finished. I'm tryin' me best to git a free permit on account o' not havin' me sight. I know there's some o' the other men gits 'em, an' that gives 'em a chance to bid under us as has to pay; an' whin I git that, I'll be able to meet the best o' 'em, providin' I can git me a horse agin."

"But I thought you said you had a horse."

"I did till two months back, sor, whin he took sick o' the glanders and died on me. Thin I spint ivery last cent o' me money on a baste that was recommended to me as bein' sound, savin' he was a bit spavined, an' begorra, sor, in less than a week he wint bad, an' the Cruelty Society took him away and shot him, sor. The agent says to me, 'It's only the luck o' your bein' blind,' says he, 'that I don't ariste yez and' have yez fined,' says he. Take the boy, Mag. He's fell asleep." This to his wife, a sweet-faced little woman, who had been crooning a lullaby to a bundle of lesser babyhood as the two men talked.

Halloran rose from his chair by the stove, which was cold and comfortless, and stretching himself to his height of six feet two, displayed a figure that would have done credit to a disciple of Vulcan. He was without coat or vest, and was in his stocking feet.

"How have you managed since the horse was taken? Can you get out of it whole when you have to hire?" asked the reporter.

"It's barely whole I git out of it. I have to pay $2 a day for the baste an' feed him at noon, an' whin the end o' the week comes there's scarce a dollar left for the rest o' us. But I used to have to hire one, two or three times a week, or me ashes would pile up on me, an' the superintendents would let me job on me. Wid a horse o' me own, I can git along, as I have tin or twelve dollars a week fur meself."

Such a man was not long without a horse to cart his ashes. The reporter used his head as well as his heart, and Halloran soon was possessed of the nag, the coveted permit, and the right again to work for his living.

How to Be Popular.

Every one would like to have a gracious manner, to be popular, to be loved by everybody, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. It is a legitimate ambition to be well thought of and admired by our fellow men. Yet the majority of us are not willing to make any great sacrifice to acquire this art of arts; in fact, we are all the time doing things which repel others and which inevitably tend to make us unpopular.

We have to take infinite pains to succeed in our vocations or any accomplishment worth while, and should we expect to gain the air of arts, the charm of personality, the power to please, to attract, to interest, without making great efforts?

Selfishness in all its forms is always and everywhere despised. No one likes a person who is bound up in himself, who is constantly thinking how he can advance his own interests, and promote his own comfort.

The secret of popularity is to make everybody you meet feel that you are especially interested in him. If you really feel kindly toward others, if you sincerely wish to please, you will have no difficulty in doing so. But if you are cold, indifferent, retiring, silent, selfish; if you are all wrapped up in yourself and think only of what may advance your own interests or increase your own comfort, you never can become popular.

Lucifer's ambition was his undoing—but look at the free advertising he got out of it!

The tug is the only thing that has its bows behind.

GOOD SHORT STORIES

A well-known Scottish clergyman got into conversation in a railway carriage with a workman, who informed him that he had been a coupler on a railway for several years. "Oh," said the minister, "I can beat that. I have been a coupler for over twenty years. 'Aye,' replied the workman, "but I can uncouple, and you canna."

After waiting for several weeks without hearing from her story, the amateur author wrote the magazine editor, requesting an early decision, saying that she had "other irons in the fire." Promptly came the editor's response: "Dear Madam: I have read your story, and, after giving it careful consideration, I should advise you to put it with the other irons."

One of the anecdotes which Andrew Carnegie is fond of telling concerns a crabbed bachelor and an aged spinster, who one day found themselves at a concert. The selections were apparently entirely unfamiliar to the gentleman, but when Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was begun he pricked up his ears. "That sounds familiar," he exclaimed. "I'm not very strong on these classical pieces, but that's very good. What is it?" The spinster cast down her eyes. "That," she told him, demurely, "is the Maiden's Prayer."

A Dover lawyer tells a story in which figures the Honorable H. L. Dawes, who, it seems, in his younger days was an indifferent speaker. Shortly after his admission to the bar he had a case which was tried before a North Adams justice of the peace, and Dawes was opposed by a lawyer whose eloquence attracted a large crowd. The justice was perspiring in the crowded room and evidently fast losing his temper. Finally he drew off his coat and, in the midst of the eloquent address, burst out: "Mr. Attorney, supposing that you take a seat and let Mr. Dawes speak. I want to thin out this crowd."

Small boys are not always as sympathetic as their relatives wish, but, on the other hand, they are seldom as heartless as they sometimes appear. "Why are you crying so, Tommy?" inquired one of the boys' aunts, who found her small nephew seated on the doorstep lifting up his voice in loud wails. "The b-baby fell d-downstairs!" blubbered Tommy. "Oh, that's too bad," said the aunt, stepping over him and opening the door. "I do hope the little dear wasn't much hurt!" "S-she's only hurt a little!" wailed Tommy. "But Dorothy s-saw her fall, while I'd gone to the g-grocery! I never s-see anything!"

A theatrical manager delighted in taking a rise out of conceited or vain members of his company. "I see you are getting on fairly well," he remarked. "Fairly? I am getting on very well," replied the hero of the play, proudly. "I played Hamlet for the first time last night. You can see by the papers' glowing criticisms how well I got on." "I have not read them," replied the other quietly, "but I was there." "Oh, you were. Well, you noticed how swimmingly everything went off? Of course, I made a bundle of one part by falling into Ophelia's grave, but I think the audience appreciated even that." "I know they did," said the manager with a slight smile, "but they were frightfully sorry when you climbed out again!"

Postage Stamps.

Postage stamps constitute one of our national products which refuse to yield to civilizing influences.

They have several bad habits of which they ought to be cured. In the first place, they do not rise in price with that alry ebullency for which our national products have become justly famous. They don't even fluctuate. Almost any professor of political economy will admit that this is a gross error. There ought to be seasons of the year when postage stamps fluctuate violently so that the poor men could not afford them at all. In that way postage stamps would now and then provide an outlet for some ambitious soul to make his name forever revered by securing a corner in them, to say nothing of the smaller fry who could make handsome livings year in and year out by buying and selling stamps on margin.

Another difficulty is that one knows exactly what one is buying, for they cannot be adulterated. Anything that is properly civilized ought to lend itself readily to adulteration.

Furthermore, the price of postage stamps does not yield readily to car shortages, strikes, tariffs, free coinage of silver, big sticks, political oratory, investigating committees, sectional jealousies or yellow journalism.

Our postage stamps have been altogether too conservative and our leniency with them has almost reached the breaking point.—Success Magazine.

An Illusion Preserved.

"I am quite sure," said the self-conscious girl, "that I would have been a great actress if I had gone on the stage."

"You are fortunate," replied Miss Cayenne. "If you had gone on the stage you might have had your doubts."—Washington Star.

The Wag and the Waggon.

"Fountain pens," snapped the wife whose tongue had found out the secret of perpetual motion, "remind me, Horace, of some husbands!"

"Why?" responded the meek little man.

"Expensive, can't be depended on, won't work, and half the time they're broken!" she snorted.

"That's pretty rough, Maria!" bleated Horace. "I call it most unkind, in fact. Really! But you couldn't compare a fountain pen with some women."

"Of course not!"

"No, Maria. You see, a fountain pen will dry up, and some wives won't."

And then he made a bee line for the Underground.—Life.

WELL KIDNEYS KEEP THE BODY WELL.

When the kidneys do their duty, the blood is filtered clear of uric acid and other waste. Weak kidneys do not filter off all the bad matter. This is the cause of rheumatic pains, backache and urinary disorders. Doan's Kidney Pills cure weak kidneys.

J. P. Alexander, 820 Ave. D, Council Bluffs, Ia., says: "I had backache, painful urinary disorders and kidney ills from the close of the war. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1906 and the benefit has been permanent."

Remember the name—Doan's. For sale by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. 50 cents a box.

All in the Same Fix.

The Lawrence Times tells this one: A reporter was sent to write up a fire in a residence. Going to the door, he inquired for the "lady of the house." The maid said she was out. "Are any of the family at home?" asked the scribe. "No, they are all out," was the reply. "Well, wasn't there a fire here last evening?" "Yes," said the hired girl, "but that's out, too."—Atlanta Constitution.

Beautiful Wall Coatings for Homes.

In line with the progress of all other things in these modern days is the beautiful, perfect and sanitary wall coatings for our homes. Alabastine is the name of a rich, soft and velvety preparation for the decoration of walls and ceilings. It adheres to the walls of its own adhesive qualities. It is inexpensive, clean, artistic and so easily put on that any one can follow the printed directions on every package. Any shade or tint is easily produced. Alabastine is proof against insects or disease germs so prevalent in wall paper. It does not rub off and flake like kalsomine. A complete color plan to help make the home beautiful, together with a book about home decorations and samples of color effects will all be sent free by the Alabastine Company, 482 Grandville avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich. This liberal offer to home decorators deserves careful perusal.

ADDS A QUEEN TO HIS LIST

The Colonel Warmly Received at Hetloo.

A RIGHT FRIENDLY MEETING

The Reception Accorded the Roosevelts by Queen Wilhelmina of Holland Was Devoid of the Stifling Formalities of State, Partaking Rather of the Nature of a Pleasant Family Party.

Amsterdam, April 30.—To a brace of kings and one king-emperor, Colonel Roosevelt has added the only queen regnant in Europe. When the automobiles drew up before the palace at Het Loo, Prince Henry, the prince consort, in a frock coat, was at the top of the stairs to welcome the former president of the United States. He grasped the colonel warmly by the hand without any formal presentation. Friendly informality was the keynote of the visit of the Roosevelt party. They were first shown to their rooms in order to make necessary changes in their costumes and were then conducted to the drawing room, where Mr. Beaupre, the American minister to The Hague, presented the colonel, Mrs. Roosevelt, Kermit and Ethel and Mrs. Beaupre to the queen.

The presentation did not take place in the big state drawing room, but in the queen's private room. The party then entered the dining room, and after a talk of a quarter of an hour luncheon was served. Colonel Roosevelt sat at the right of Queen Wilhelmina and Mrs. Roosevelt at the right of Prince Henry. There were thirty distinguished guests at the luncheon, all of them high court officials.

The affair was in every way quiet and intimate. Colonel Roosevelt and his wife expressed a desire to see the little princess, who has cut her eighth tooth, but Queen Wilhelmina said that she was sorry, but she could not show the baby, as she had just been vaccinated.

As there was no further time in which to visit the gardens, the party remained indoors talking until a couple of landaus took them to the Aple-dorn station, where they were cheered by a great crowd. On arriving at Amsterdam the colonel was met by the burgomaster and a great crowd. The people broke down the barriers and crowded onto the station platform to see the colonel.

MARK OF CONFIDENCE

Old Officers of American Newspaper Publishers Re-Elected.

New York, April 30.—The American Newspaper Publishers' association at its annual meeting here elected the following officers: President, Herman Ridder of the New York Staats Zeitung; vice president, Bruce Haldeman of the Louisville Courier-Journal; secretary, Elbert H. Baker of the Cleveland Plaindealer; treasurer, William J. Pattison of the New York Evening Post; directors, H. U. Brown of the Indianapolis News, F. P. Glass of the Montgomery Advertiser, C. Hamlin of the New York Tribune, and C. W. Knapp of the St. Louis Republic. All of these officers served last year, the entire ticket being re-elected without opposition.

Affirmed the Verdict.

New York, April 30.—The appellate division of the supreme court has affirmed the verdict of the jury in the court of general sessions convicting Carlo De Fornaro, a newspaper writer and cartoonist, on the charge of criminally libelling Rafael Reyes Espindola, editor of El Imparcial, of Mexico City.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Sound Sleep of Good Health.

The restorative power of sound sleep cannot be overestimated and any ailment that prevents it is a menace to health. J. L. Sothers, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "For a long time I have been unable to sleep soundly at nights, because of pains across my back and soreness of my kidneys. My appetite was very poor and my general condition was much run down. I have been taking Foley's Kidney Pills but a short time and now sleep as sound as a rock. I eat and enjoy my meals, and my general condition is greatly improved. I can honestly recommend Foley's Kidney Pills as I know they have cured me." Sold by all druggists.

An Oversight.

An old German maker of violoncellos had just finished one which he considered to be a particularly fine piece of work, and he proudly lifted it up for a friendly musician who was standing near him to admire. He had just called attention to its beautiful lines when all of a sudden something rattled.

"Ach," he exclaimed, "I have left der glue pot inside!"

Your tongue is coated.

Your breath is foul.
Headaches come and go.

These symptoms show that your stomach is the trouble. To remove the cause is the first thing, and Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will do that. Easy to take and most effective. Sold by all dealers.

The Puzzle.

"I should like you to understand, sir, that poets are born," exclaimed a writer of verse to an editor who had received him coolly.
"I understand that thoroughly," the editor replied. "But why? That's what bothers me."

Every family and especially those who reside in the country should be provided at all times with a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. There is no telling when it may be wanted in case of an accident or emergency. It is most excellent in all cases of rheumatism, sprains and bruises. Sold by all dealers.

Pleasure of Wisdom.

"Your boy likes to go to school better than he used to," said the relative.
"Yes," answered Mr. Biggins. "He's getting old enough to enjoy learning a lot of things so that he can come home and dazzle me with his superior knowledge."—Washington Star.

Diarrhoea should be cured without loss of time and by a medicine which like Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy not only cures promptly but produces no unpleasant after effects. It never fails and is pleasant and safe to take. Sold by all dealers.

"What are they giving away over here?"
"Come along, Jack. It's a demonstration of face powder, of no interest to us men."
"Oh, I don't know. Let's ask for a taste."—Washington Herald.

Prompt relief in all cases of throat and lung trouble if you use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pleasant to take soothing and healing in effect. Sold by all dealers.

Largest Coral Reef.

The largest coral reef in the world is the Australian Barrier reef, which is 1,100 miles in length.

GYROSCOPE CAR TO GET A REAL TRYOUT

Practical Line to be Constructed in Alaska.

London, April 30.—Louis Brennan's gyroscope monorail system is to undergo a practical test. A contract just signed grants the exclusive rights for the use of the system in Alaska to an American syndicate headed by John Ballaine of Seattle. New York bankers are backing the syndicate, which undertakes to build 100 miles of line within a year. Mr. Brennan will complete the cars, orders for which have been given by Mr. Ballaine, who has seen the gyroscope car undergoing practical tests in which it carried over a hundred passengers at the rate of twenty-six miles an hour. Mr. Ballaine is very enthusiastic over the system. He said: "I estimate the cost of the hundred miles of line we are going to build from the Matemiska coal fields toward Fairbanks will not exceed $200 a mile, compared with at least $20,000 for even the lightest double-rail track. The ability of the gyroscope car to take curves will obviate most of the difficulties. If the initial road proves a success, which I fully anticipate it will, branches will be laid to the various gold fields, greatly increasing the Alaskan gold output."

MONORAIL GYROSCOPE CAR.

SUSTAINS HIS CHARGE

Battle Creek Man Has Two Brooklynites Convicted of Extortion.

New York, April 30.—George S. McFarlane and Harry Brinkerhoff of Brooklyn were convicted before Judge Mulqueen in general sessions of extortion. The complainant was C. J. Wells, a dealer in millinery at Battle Creek, Mich. Brinkerhoff was drinking with Wells in the tenderloin on the night of Feb. 24 last, and they went to a hotel for the night. McFarlane burst in to the room and by threats of defamation induced Wells to give up a diamond ring valued at $200, two drafts for $100 each and two notes, one for $500 and the other for $400.

A Lady of Pizarro Tells Story of Awful Suffering That Cardui
Finally Relieved.

Pizarro, Va.—"I suffered for several years," writes Mrs. Dorma A. Smith, "with that awful backache and the bearing down sensations, so fully described in your book."

"I tried doctors and other medicines and found little relief, until I was induced to try Wine of Cardui, when I found instant relief and today I can heartily recommend Cardui to all suffering women and think there is no other as good."

In some instances, Cardui gives instant relief; in others, it may take a little time. But in all cases of female trouble Cardui can be depended on to be of benefit, as it is a specific remedy for women and acts in a curative way on the womanly organs.

As a general tonic for women, to build up your strength, improve your appetite, bring back rosy cheeks and make you look and feel young and happy, nothing you can find will do so much for you as Cardui.

MRS. ROBERT H. NORRIS

I Suffered with Kidney Trouble.

Mr. Robert H. Norris, 566 East 11th St., East Oakland, Cal., writes: "We have never had any other medicine but Peruna in our home since we have been married."

"I suffered with kidney and bladder trouble, but two months' treatment with Peruna made me a well and strong man."

"My wife felt weak and was easily tired and was also troubled with various pains, but since she took Peruna she is well and strong."

"We are both very grateful to you and gladly do we give this unsolicited testimonial, feeling that it is the least we can do in return for what Peruna has done for us."

Catarrh Entirely Relieved.

Mr. Ira Henney, Fairfield, Freestone Co., Texas, writes:

"I am completely cured of all symptoms of catarrh."

"I can truly say that Peruna is the best medicine I ever saw. I will always recommend Peruna to all my friends, for catarrh."

Catarrh of Head.

Mr. C. Hallock, Antwerp, Ohio, writes:

"My daughter Allie, after taking three bottles of your Peruna, is entirely cured of catarrh of the head of two years' standing. We recommend Peruna to anybody who has catarrh."

Peruna is manufactured by the Peruna Drug Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Funeral.

The funeral of John A. Dunn, who died Thursday morning at his home on West Oak street, occurred at the residence Saturday morning at ten o'clock, conducted by the Rev. H. H. Allen, after which the remains were interred at Riverview cemetery.

EAGLE CATCHES FISH.

A. L. Parker Catches Both on River Above Rockford.

A. L. Parker brought an eagle into Seymour this morning, with which is connected an unusually interesting story.

Mr. Parker was on the river bank, several miles above Rockford, when he noticed the eagle flying near the water. Suddenly it dived into the river and appeared with a large buffalo fish in its mouth. Mr. Parker shot the eagle and was also successful in getting the fish. The eagle measured seven feet and eight inches from top to tip.

Strawberries Safe.

Mrs. Henry Pollert brought several samples of strawberries into this office Friday evening, which were certainly fine, and shows that they have not been injured by the recent cold weather and frosts. Mrs. Pollert believes that the berries will be ready to market in about two weeks.

COTTON BULLS DIDN'T SHOW SIGN OF DEFEAT

When They Got Notice to Put Up $15,000,000.

New York, April 30.—Yesterday was "notice day" on the cotton exchange, and in accordance with the rules sellers of the May option were obliged to declare their intention to make deliveries next Monday. Some 200,000 bales of cotton were thus declared, which means that James A. Patten and other bull leaders will be obliged to put up about $15,000,000 on the first day of next week in order to make good on their contracts. The bull leaders received their notices without a tremor and calmly boosted the price of the May option a quarter of a cent a pound higher. At the present time there are 226,000 bales in port.

J. A. Patten, who is understood to be one of the heaviest buyers of the May option, refused to say how much cotton he had contracted for; what if any notices he had received, and how much money he would need to put up to cover his purchases.

"That is nobody's business but mine," he said. "Although you may rest assured that I will pay for every bale I have agreed to buy. This much I will say, I have not bought or sold a single contract under the July option in four weeks."

Entertained.

The freshmen cotillion, one of the novel barn-swallow entertainments at Wellesley college, was the prettiest social function held thus far in the college year.

Among the fair freshmen who last night entertained the upper class girls in their own unique fashion, were Mary V. Johnson and Edith M. Evans, of Indianapolis; also Edna Swope, of Seymour, Ind., and Cecelia Hollingsworth, of Rensselaer, Ind. The cotillion took place in the big college barn, and consisted of twelve numbers.—Indianapolis Star.

THE TEMPEST.

He shall give his angels charge
Over thee in all thy ways.
Though the thunders roar at large,
Though the lightning round me plays.
Like a child I lay my head
In sweet sleep upon my bed.

Though the terror comes so close,
It shall have no power to smite;
It shall deepen my repose,
Turn the darkness into light.
Touch of angels' hands is sweet;
Not a stone shall hurt my feet.

All thy waves and billows go
Over me to press me down
Into arms so strong, I know
They will never let me drown.
Ah, my God, how good thy will!
I will nestle and be still.
—Alice Freeman Palmer.

THE RETURN

Philip Graham, coming to the end of long pages of blue parchment, folded them mechanically and tied them up with pink tape. He rang the bell on his desk.

"Stimson," he said as his clerk entered, "ask Miss Kennet if she will please come to me."

A few moments later a girl entered the room.

"Miss Kennet," he said, "will you mind looking through some papers for me?"

He had risen to his feet, and a queer look flashed to his eyes. For an instant her lip quivered.

"Oh, why won't you forget that I was ever anything but your secretary?" she said.

He bit his lip.

"You know why," he said, half under his breath; "but I—I will not forget again."

He picked up his keys, and striding across the room unlocked a japanned tin box marked "D."

Gladys Kennet turned over the papers in the box. Her head was beginning to ache, but then it had ached many, many times since her father died—nearly two years ago, and she ought to have grown used to it now. Her thoughts stopped abruptly with a shock.

"WHY WON'T YOU FORGET?"

She stared down wildly, with the color driving from her face.

She clutched a faded newspaper cutting with fingers growing cold.

"A marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place, between Lieut. Reginald Lindley and Miss Gladys Kennet, only daughter of Col. Kennet of Ribstone hall."

The paper dropped to the floor. The lawyer's room, with its japanned tin boxes, whizzed wildly around her.

What mockery it had been! Only a few days after that paragraph had appeared her father had died, bankrupt, and she had been left penniless and alone. In less than a week Reginald had gone too, and if it had not been for Philip—Philip whom she had despised for being her father's solicitor—she would have been what?

The sob in her throat refused to be choked back. Her heart beat up loudly, persistently, a drumming sounded in her ears, and her head dropped suddenly, sharply amongst the dusty papers.

Philip started quickly to his feet and ran across the room.

"Gladys—Miss Kennet!"

She tried to struggle to her feet.

"It is silly of me," she said unsteadily. "I—I—ought to have forgotten by now."

He pushed her gently back and took her hands in his.

"Miss Kennet—Gladys—let me help you to forget," he said huskily. "You know I love you—you know I loved you long before—long before that happened."

She passed her hands across her eyes as though to clear them, and then looked into his.

"I don't know," she said in a whisper. "You have been so good to me that sometimes I think that if—if I could be sure that Reginald would never come back I could love you as much—as I once loved him."

"Let me try to make you," he said eagerly. "Gladys, darling, if you can only give me half your heart I shall be content."

She put out her hands to him with her eyes full of tears.

"Look, Philip, look," she cried. She threw up the sash and they both looked out on the busy market square.

"Look!" Gladys repeated. "It is the ring Reginald gave me, and I have done with him now forever."

She raised her arm and flung the ring from her far out in the square.

She turned to Philip breathless and white.

"I have done with him now forever," she whispered.

He sent her away early.

"I shall come after you soon, darling," he said, "and we'll go and dine somewhere and have the evening together."

After she had gone he sat still, dreaming at his desk. He lifted his head quickly as the door opened and his clerk entered with a card in his hand. He took it carelessly in his fingers.

The card dropped from his clutch and lay staring at him from the desk. "Reginald Lindley."

"Send him in," he said, and during the few moments that elapsed before Reginald came, he sat like a dead man, dumb, motionless, cold.

The door was swung open.

"Hello, Graham! How are you, I say? Great Scott! I believe you've been poring over those papers ever since I was here last. You look just the same, only dustier."

Philip rose slowly to his feet. He was cold—horribly cold, and his heart seemed to be lying dead and heavy in his chest.

"You are a stranger," he said with difficulty. "I thought we should never see you in Rochminster again, and you can't wonder at my surprise."

Reginald laughed. "No, I suppose not," he said; "and upon my word, I don't think I ever could have come back only—I I chanced to hear a bit of news."

Reginald sauntered slowly across the room and back, whipping his stick against his boot. "Graham, how and where is Miss Kennet?" he asked abruptly.

Philip flinched as though Reginald's stick had struck his face.

"I heard that she was still here, and that you had given her employment," Reginald went on, "and I came here on purpose to see her."

"I suppose you think I behaved badly," the lieutenant went on, "and I suppose I did, but I couldn't help myself. When her father died penniless, it was impossible for me to marry her, for I had scarcely enough money for myself, and so I thought the kindest thing was to go away without saying anything. But now that there is a chance of her having some money, after all, it is altogether different, for I am fond of her, you know, Graham."

Philip had looked up with a start.

"She has no money," he said hoarsely.

Reginald nodded his head eagerly. "Not yet, old man," he said lightly, "but she will have. I happened on an old boy out in Australia who's going to leave her some. He is the colonel's brother and her uncle, and he's pretty nearly gone. I gave him all particulars about her, and it will be all right. The old buffer isn't married, and there's nobody else for him to leave it to. And he thinks Gladys and I are still engaged—as, in fact, we are—and that we are only waiting for a little money to get married. I explained it all to him—he laughed and winked at Philip—and now his sole anxiety is to die and oblige us. Where is Miss Kennet, Graham?"

Philip was white to the lips now.

"She is at home," he said with difficulty. "She left early. She—she—lodges with Mrs. Caley in Stone street."

He turned away. His one wish now was that Reginald would go quickly. He could not stand much more.

"Oh, all right. Anybody would think you were jealous of me! Well, good-bye."

The door closed and for long Philip stood still in the middle of the room staring at it.

Stimson opened the door. "Did you call, sir?"

"No, no," said Philip hastily. "No, that is all. You can go."

He heard the preparations for departure, but he still sat before his desk without making any attempt to put his papers away. He wondered what Gladys would do now—

His thoughts broke off and unconsciously he stiffened himself. Someone had come into the outer office. A clerk had forgotten something evidently; he hoped he wouldn't want anything of him.

Steps sounded—quick steps, that ran, and then the door was flung open and dashed to again, and a breathless figure whirled itself across the room and dropped on its knees at his side.

"Philip—Philip—Philip! Look up. I want you more than ever. I love you better—a thousand times better than I ever loved Reginald. Oh, Philip, my dearest, I've just seen him and I know."—Cassell's Journal.

It is Not Always Possible to Save.

The majority of the old ask nothing of society, but this very fact should make the support of society to those who do need its aid, more immediate and willing. There are many who through misfortune are left in age bereft of money and of their natural supporters, says Walter Weyl, in Success Magazine. A bank may fail, an employee abscond, a business panic arrive, an error of judgment or an unwise act of generosity may strip a man or woman of the savings of a lifetime. The wife of such a man may lie ill and the savings of years go in a month's doctor's bills. The sudden slaying of a husband in an industrial accident may leave the wife deprived of expected support.

And not all men can save. Some are honest and hard-working, but have not the knack of getting and holding. They are marbled to receive and wax to retain. Others do not marry, or marry and have no children, or they lose their children in early infancy. Family bonds are mortal. There are always men who through no fault of their own are left naked and alone in their old age.

Police men, like rainbows, are tokens of peace, usually appearing after a storm.

Enthusiasm Dulled.

"Don't you feel as if you would like to leave footprints in the sands of time?" asked the ambitious citizen.

"No," answered Mr. Crosslots, gloomily; "out where I live the mud is eighteen inches deep, and I don't feel as if I wanted to see another footprint as long as I live."—Washington Star.

An Advertiser.

"Why do you constantly permit reports of your death to go out?"

"Because," answered the Moroccan bandit, "I want my name in print, and those are the only reports I can get past the press censor."—Washington Star.

Endorsing His Note.

Accounted For.

The village cornetist, who made his living as a barber, was massaging a patron's face.

"That's a peculiar way of massaging a nose," remarked the man in the chair. "Some New York method?"

"That? Oh, no. I was just practicing the fingering of the Second Hungarian Rhapsody."—Puck.

Still Higher Finance.

"Surely," began the private secretary, "it won't pay to give to both parties."

"My dear fellow," replied the astute president, "you are forgetting that in a year or two one of them will be offering me a rebate not to support the other."—Puck.

"If I were to tell you all I know," he commented, sagely.

"I should not be any wiser than I am now," she replied, tersely.—Detroit Free Press.

Making the Best of It.

Theatrical Manager—Hi, there! What are you doing with that pistol? Discouraged Lover—Going to kill myself.

AN ARISTOCRATIC BEGGAR.

Even a beggar may have pride—at least in Mexico. At a railroad station in that country, says W. E. Carson in his book, "Mexico," he noticed, standing a little removed from the motley throng of mendicants, a melancholy-looking Mexican, wearing a rather battered brown felt sombrero, his limbs encased in skin-tight trousers of thin gray cloth, adorned with numerous patches. Over his shoulders was a bright red blanket. He was strutting away at an old-fashioned mandolin and singing some mournful Spanish song.

Catching sight of me, he stopped playing and lifted his sombrero. I went out on the car platform and handed him 5 cents. To my astonishment, he politely declined my humble offering.

"Senor," said he, in choice Spanish, with some emotion, "you must pardon me for being unable to accept your gift, but I am a 10-cent beggar, senor, and never, never accept a smaller gratuity."

Drawing himself up with an air of pride, he continued, "I shall be honored to sing for your entertainment a song of old Spain or one of our noble Mexican airs, but always for a fee of 10 cents, never for less, for I am a 10-cent beggar, senor, poor as I am."

It was impossible to resist this touching protest, so with an apology I handed the courtly vagrant his proper fee, which he acknowledged with "a thousand thanks" and a graceful bow.

At the other end of the car the mob of beggars were scrambling for copper coins thrown to them by my fellow passengers. The melancholy minstrel glanced at them, shrugged his shoulders, and waved his hand deprecatingly.

"Ah, senor," he observed, "those poor people! They have to work hard to earn their bread; good folk, worthy folk, well deserving of your charity;

but they give you a very bad impression of Mexico. Pray, senor, do not class them with poor musicians like myself."

With these words he commenced twanging his discordant instrument again, and once more burst into a song so dismal that it seemed to make the gloomy weather even more depressing.

MAKING LOVE IN PORTUGAL.

Early Stages of Courtship Are Romantic and Picturesque.

The most important event in the life of a Portuguese woman is marriage, says Leslie's Weekly. Next in importance are the early days of courtship, for a Portuguese courtship is the essence of romance, and the ways of the Portuguese lover are singularly picturesque. Here is a little drama in which Cupid is stage director. If a young Portuguese sees in the street a pretty girl with whom he would like to become acquainted, he follows her. Chaparons are not impossible obstructions. He follows her right up to her very door and notes the address. Next day he comes again, and if the young lady approves of him—for she certainly saw him the day before—she is on the lookout. Sometimes hard fate in the guise of an angry parent prevents her, and then the gallant youth is kept waiting. Sooner or later she leans over the balcony and smiles at him. The happy youth ties a note to a cord which the fair lady drops from the balcony. The next day the young man comes again. This time he rings at the door. If the inquiries which the young lady's elders have made prove satisfactory, the swain is admitted to make the acquaintance of the young lady. After that, courtship in Portugal is about the same as it is in Kankakee or Kalamazoo.

How Danish Farmers Prosper.

The Danish farmers, living as they do on or near the seacoast, are great exporters of dairy stuff. England is so big a customer that the Danes in fun reproach their neighbors with eating up their butter, and leaving them only oleomargarin. "Yet," says F. M. Butlin in "Among the Danes," "they are not all of that way of thinking, for one old farmer asked us if we could not persuade our fellow countrymen to eat butter with their cake."

"If you ask how the Danish farmers manage to keep pace with our [the British] increasing appetite for Danish eggs, butter and bacon, the answer is, they co-operate. The butter which is exported is made in their co-operative dairies. The pigs are slain in their co-operative slaughter houses, and the Danes are not a little proud of the process. One distinguished traveler complains that during his stay in Denmark he was always being asked to come and see a pig killed."

"The eggs are exported by co-operative societies. If a Dane has only one egg he can export it—always provided it be a good egg. No mistake must be made about that. Before the eggs are packed for export, down in the co-operative factory on the shore, they are held over a basin filled with electric light, when all defects can be detected with the naked eye. It is no use for an old egg to pose as a young one then. Each egg is marked with the owner's number and the number of his district; the owners of bad eggs are fined. No less than 18,000 Danes belong to this one society. Here, too, butter is packed for the English market."

Aerial Nourishment.

KILLED WITHOUT HITTING.

Daniel Boone Was a Wonderful Marksman and Never Missed.

As a small boy Tip heard an old gentleman, upward of 100, tell about seeing Daniel Boone, and about some of his mighty doings when this old gentleman himself was a small boy, according to the New York Times. He said that Boone was a very large man, something over six feet, deep-chested, very heavy shouldered, but was small in the belly, with long, thin, strong legs, large, hard hands and feet and iron gray hair and hazel eyes, very large and with sights always opening and shutting, working actively like the nervous pupil of the eye of a game rooster. Boone was passing through from a trip out West and had with him only his hatchet, hunting knife and rifle and was without dogs or companions. He had only a coonskin cap, buckskin hunting shirt down to his knees, high laced cowskin moccasins and no pants or underclothes. His rifle was as tall as Boone himself and very heavy, with a long, thin, white hickory ramrod. This old man had been a hunter all his life and said the rifle was the biggest and heaviest he had ever seen.

The great thing was to see Boone shoot. Boone, without taking a rest, hit a spot every time as big as a man's hat at 200 yards, aiming very slowly and deliberately, for that was long before the days of cartridges and quick snap-shooting. Boone at forty or fifty yards "barked" two squirrels, then an unheard-of marvel, though common enough now. He hit the bark of the tree right under where the squirrel was sitting crouching, and when the rifle said "pop" Mr. Squirrel was blown up into the air five or six feet, and picked up stone dead without so much as a scratch on him. Killing a tough old fox squirrel without a bullet touching him or drawing a drop of blood looked like a big magic or witchcraft to early settlers and Indians.

Boone drove a nail or two and showed how he loaded his gun. He had a small powder horn filled with finest grain powder about as hard and clean from smut as the best modern; a little hollow powder measure made of elderwood, such as boys make whistles of. An he showed how he gauged his powder by laying the rifle bullet in the palm of his hand, then pouring on powder until the bullet was just exactly hid in the pile of powder. This was the right load, so he cut his elder to this measure. After pouring the powder down the barrel he laid a piece of greased linen patching of finest, smoothest homespun over the end, and forced it down the barrel with the butt end of his knife, cut off the patching sticking out, then shoved the bullet home with the ramrod—a hard, tight job. With a quick jerk of the wrist he would pack tight the bullet and powder and drive so hard that the ramrod almost jumped out of the gun on the rebound.

Boone's rifle stock was the shortest and most angularly curved of any in the village. And this same Daniel Boone stock, seen for the first time by the old gentleman, has now been adopted as a world model by all armies and manufactories. As a matter of fact, some of the finest Yankee wholesale manufacturers deliberately copied the Kentucky rifle stock as their model, as Dr. Norvin Green, the organizer and first president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, long ago told.

The Wrong and the Right Way.

Some people think that a sort of deceptive diplomacy is necessary to popularity; but if there is any quality which is absolutely essential, it is sincerity. Nothing else will take its place. There is no reason why we should pretend to be interested in another, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. We should be interested in him. It is much easier to be really interested, to know about a person, his occupation, his hobby, the things that interest him, than to pretend to be, just for effect. Pretense, deception and shams are fatal, because, if there is anything a person demands of another it is genuineness, sincerity, and the moment he finds that a person is only pretending to be interested in him, he loses his confidence, and confidence is the foundation of everything. Nobody wants to hear another vaporize, palaver and pretend; nobody wants to feel that he is the victim of a social diplomat who is trying to cover up his real self, pretending an interest in him, just as a ward politician feigns an interest in voters just before election. We all demand absolute sincerity, genuineness. People will very quickly penetrate masks. They can easily tell when anyone is shamming.

An Insinuating Missive.

He was a German student, and this was the letter he addressed to his uncle:

"Dear Uncle—A very strange thing happened yesterday. I went to see a friend of mine at the bank who knows your handwriting very well, and he thought you were ill, as I had not lately presented any checks signed by you. He begs to be remembered to you, as also do I, and you might let my friend see your signature again. If you are very busy, you might send a blank check, and I will fill it in. Yours affectionately, KARL."

It is said that most suicides regret it after swallowing the fatal dose—just as some men do after getting married.

It is as important to learn that you can't always have your way as it is to learn arithmetic.

A man can have most of his vices overlooked by inheriting a fortune.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Aikay, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my illness, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW

Detroit people have organized a Jean Valjean club to furnish assistance to paroled prisoners.

Bled eight feet from the ground a rubber-yielding tree of fifteen inches diameter gives three pints of liquor.

The city of London corporation consists of the lord mayor, twenty-five other aldermen and 206 common councillors.

The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals employs over 160 officers to detect and prevent cruelty.

Many tons of wool were ruined in North China last August by heavy protracted rains, when there was no way of keeping the wool dry.

One of the Western States has sent east, as a sample of the agricultural possibilities, nineteen apples, each weighing more than a pound.

At the end of 1909 the Bell Telephone Companies owned 3,500,000 telephones, while 1,500,000 were owned by companies under contract agreeing with the associated Bell Companies. This is an increase of 600,000 telephones during the year. The system comprises 10,250,000 miles of wire, 400,000 miles of which were added last year. Half of the total mileage is underground.

The travels of grains of sand have long been a matter of scientific record, says Harper's Weekly. Years ago it was established that particles picked up on the coast of Pas de Calais had their origin in the rocks of Brittany, from 120 to 180 miles distant. Another standard fact is the discovery on the coast of Denmark of chalk dust which undoubtedly came from the cliffs of Normandy.

Miss Anna C. Hedger recently resigned the principalship of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls in New York to become the head of the new department of household economics in the University of New Zealand. She was chosen for this work by a special envoy following an investigation of the work of leading instructors in domestic economics in England, Canada and the United States.

Recently at a meeting of the New York Academy of Sciences Charles H. Townsend described his studies in the Strait of Magellan. Among other things, he spoke of the native tribes inhabiting that region, and expressed the opinion that those dwelling among the more westerly channels of the strait are probably the lowest of existing primitive races. They go almost naked and live mainly on shell-fish.

According to a Turkish newspaper of 1876, William E. Gladstone was born in 1796. For father he had a Bulgarian. His gluttony for gold made him yellow. He was of medium height, his whiskers were cropped close to his face, and "as a sign of his satanic spirit his forehead and upper forehead were bare. His evil temper has made his hair fall off, so that from a distance he might be taken for quite bald."

It has been supposed that the ancients had some method of hardening bronze tools, the secret of which had been lost. Professor Gowland of the British Institute of Metals, says that the ancient bronzes were very impure, so that their hardness could not have been due, as sometimes assumed, to their exceptional purity. On the other hand, inasmuch as modern bronzes by careful hammering can be made as hard as the ancient ones, the legend of a lost art in bronze hardening seems to be exploded.

Thirty feet beneath the surface of a newly built railroad in Spokane, Wash., a ginkgo leaf was found last spring, its age being estimated at one hundred thousand years. "It bears a message of more certainty than those carved in tablets of stone," writes Fred Niederhauser, in Harper's Weekly. "This discovery tends to substitute the theory that the coast section has been formed by successive upheavals of the earth's crust, occurring since the appearance of the great sea dyke, which has now developed into the system of the Rocky Mountains."

Men go down to the sea under billowing canvas in fewer and fewer numbers, the "tin kettle" tramp now doing the old clipper's work, but Neptune still exacts his toll from the square-rigged ships that are fated to float out upon the oceans bound ten thousand miles or more and never again be heard of. Ten big sailors thus vanished in 1908; last year eight windjammers of large burthen were recorded on the world's log of missing ships. One was an American, the four-masted Port George of 1,770 net tons; and there are few enough of ours left. Most of them are swallowed on Cape Horn voyages.—New York Press.

Nature quotes an article in the Physikalisches Zeitschrift by Dr. J. J. Kossionogow, of the Universit of Kiev, on the application of the ultramicroscope to the study of the phenomena of electrolysis. He finds that when an electrolyte is examined under the ultramicroscope, at the moment the current is switched on there appear in the field of view a number of bright points of light which travel toward the electrodes with velocities of the same order of magnitude as have been found for the ions. The path may be deviated by means of a magnet. When a point reaches an electrode it appears to attach itself and take a crystalline form. None of these appearances is observed in the case of a nonelectrolyte, and the author considers he has proved beyond the possibility of doubt that the ultramicroscope provides a powerful means of studying the motions of the ions in electrolysis.

Pleasant Conversations.

The barber was a trifle more talkative than usual, and the customer, having come directly from the dentist's chair, was perhaps hardly in an affable mood. The knight of the razor opened fire in blissful ignorance of this, however, passing glibly from the weather to foreign politics, the rival barber opposite, the practical value of religion, and was just beginning to explain in detail his views on current educational topics, when the customer suddenly growled, "Look here, where's that assistant of yours—the boy with the red hair?"

"Why, he's left me, sir. We parted Saturday night—on friendly terms and all that, you know, sir—but—"

"Umph!" groaned the other. "I liked that fellow. He was one of the most sensible talkers I ever met. I was going to ask to have him shave me always. We've had so many pleasant conversations—"

"Excuse me, sir," interrupted the barber, in amazement, "but—you mistake, sir, surely! If you'll remember, sir, poor Jim was deaf and dumb—"

"Umph! He was, was he? Well, perhaps that explains it."

Not an Inch of Healthy Skin Left.

My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heart-breaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. Robert Wattam, 1148 Forty-eighth St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9, 1909.

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate examinations and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's GREAT FAMILY DOCTOR BOOK, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of illness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the only remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is, therefore, all-important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to purchase and note that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

It is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and assists in overcoming habitual constipation permanently, also biliousness and the many ills resulting therefrom. The great trouble with all other purgatives and aperients is not that they fail to act when a single dose is taken, but that they act too violently and invariably tend to produce a habit of body requiring constantly augmented doses. Children enjoy the pleasant taste and gentle action of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the ladies find it delightful and beneficial whenever a laxative remedy is needed, and business men pronounce it invaluable, as it may be taken without interfering with business and does not gripe nor nauseate. When buying note the name, California Fig Syrup Co., printed on the front of every package. Price, 50 cents a bottle.

The Overland The Simplest Car

The Overland outsells all other cars, largely because of its matchless simplicity.

The Overland—hardly more than two years old—has become the sensation of motordom.

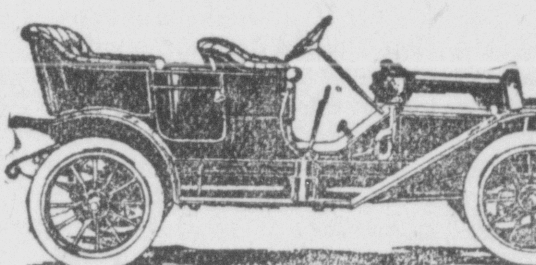

Four factories, employing 4,000 men, turn out 140 Overlands daily to meet the overwhelming demand.

Texas takes 1,500, Kansas 1,000, Iowa 1,000, Nebraska 750—all for this season's delivery. So it is in every section where this remarkable car has been known for a year.

One reason is that the Overland is almost trouble-proof. The usual complex features have all been eliminated. A child can master the car in ten minutes. A novice can run it and care for it.

One simply pushes pedals forward or backward to get on low speed, high speed or reverse. It is as simple as walking.

The car almost cares for itself. Many an owner has run from 7,000 to 10,000 miles without even cleaning a spark plug.

$1,000 to $1,500.—According to size, style and power

No expert is needed. And the cost of upkeep is the smallest of any capable car.

Then the Overland gives more for the money than any other car in existence. This is due to our enormous production and our automatic machinery.

For $1,000 you can get a 25-horse power Overland with a 102-inch wheel base. No other car of such size and power sells nearly so low.

For $1,250 you can get a 40-horse power Overland with a 112-inch wheel base. All prices include five lamps and magneto.

Know the Facts

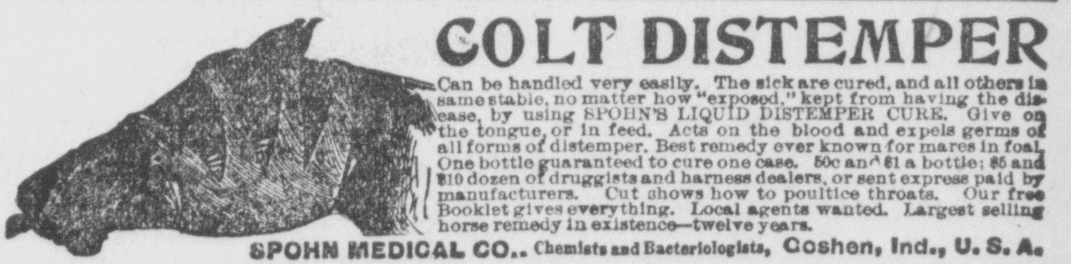

More people are buying Overlands than any other car. There must be some very strong reasons, and those reasons will appeal to you.

MR. BALLINGER
QUITE DEFIANTCalls His Opponents "Deliberate and Unqualified."

SHOWED EFFECT OF STRAIN

Upon Taking the Stand in His Own

Behalf the Secretary of the Interior

Pays His Respects to Those Who

Have Got Him Into Trouble, and

Does Not Hesitate to Call Some of Them Base Prevaricators.

Washington, April 30.—Richard A.

Ballinger, secretary of the interior,

under oath as a witness before the congressional investigation committee, told the story of his official career and gave his version of the controversy over Alaskan coal claims and conservation policies. He branded Louis R.

Glavis, the principal witness against him, as a deliberate and unqualified liar, belittled Horace T. Jones, another of the witnesses for the prosecution, raised an issue of veracity between former Secretary of the Interior J. A.

Garfield and himself, and took a fling

at former Forester Pinchot as a man with whom another could not differ on a question of policy without being considered criminal by him. In demeanor Mr. Ballinger was at once defiant and aggressive. He showed the effect of the severe nervous and physical strain under which he has been laboring for months past, but at times

his spirits seemed buoyant and there was a distinct note of pride in his voice as he told of his achievements

as a lawyer and as the "reform" mayor of Seattle and of the compliments that had been paid him by former President Roosevelt and others. Mr.

Ballinger declared that he went into the office of secretary of the interior absolutely free and untrammelled and without an interest or connection to prejudice him in any official act he might be called to take.

"I burned all my bridges behind me," said he. "I ended all my corporation connections. I did not have then nor have I ever had any interest directly or indirectly in Alaska."

Moreover, Mr. Ballinger said his relations with Mr. Garfield, whom he was succeeding, were altogether friendly, and he knew of no rancor cherished by Mr. Garfield because he was not being retained in the cabinet by President

Taft. His relations with Mr. Pinchot were at the time equally friendly, so far as he knew.

Relative to his official connection with the Cunningham cases, in which he had acted as counsel during the year intervening between his retirement as commissioner of the general land office and his becoming secretary of the interior, Mr. Ballinger asserted vigorously that he had no connection with those cases that disqualified him legally from passing on them as an official of the government. "Legally, morally and ethically I was qualified to pass on the Cunningham claims,"

he said, "but I felt a delicacy about so doing because of the fact that I had had an incidental relation with Cunningham as legal adviser. Consequently I gave orders that nothing pertaining to those cases should ever be brought before me. They were turned over to Assistant Secretary

Pierce, and to this day Mr. Pierce has never made a report to me as to any action bearing on the Cunningham claims."

Mr. Ballinger has by no means completed his testimony, and will continue on the stand.

MIGHTY THIN ICE

The Senate Regulars Came Near Being Overwhelmed.Washington, April 30.—The first real test on the administration railroad bill in the senate came late yesterday afternoon and the Republican regulars carried the day over the combination of Democrats and insurgents.
Four Democrats were absent and un-paired, otherwise the administration forces would have won by a scant margin of two votes.Six Republicans who have been wavering between the regular and insurgent lines sided with the chronic insurgents. They were Borah of Idaho, Nelson of Minnesota, Dixon of Montana, Burkett of Nebraska, Gamble of South Dakota and Bourne of Oregon.While the regulars in the senate were gliding over mighty thin ice the house was proceeding with its apparent intention of changing the identity of the bill to such an extent that even its friends will hardly recognize it.
Physical valuation by the interstate commerce commission of every railroad in the United States was the radical feature added to the bill in the house. While this action in the house is not final, it indicates plainly enough a sentiment that the house leaders will have to reckon with.The test in the senate came on an amendment offered by Cummins of Iowa, giving to the interstate commerce commission the power to approve before they may go into effect.
The Republicans voting with the Democrats on the Cummins amendment were Beveridge, Borah, Bristow, Burkett, Clapp, Cummins, Dixon, Dolliver, Gamble, La Follette and Nelson.King Edward has handed Lord
Kitchener the baton of field marshal.

Teacher Surprised.

The pupils of the Seventh grade at the Shields building, gave a surprise for Miss Amy Roegge Friday evening, from 8 till 10:30, at her home on South Chestnut street. The class had prepared several yells in her honor, and they were given with a heartiness that showed their appreciation and friendship for their hostess. The class collected up town and went down in a body. About forty were present and they had a merry time, indeed. A number of games assisted in passing the time pleasantly.
Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served and Miss Roegge received several nice presents.

GETS MANY CONGRATULATIONS

Among These Is One From Mr. Bryan,

Who Says: "We Need You in the Senate."—Mr. Kern Assumes That

Democratic Members of Legislature

Will Carry Out Popular Will Expressed by the Delegate Convention.

Indianapolis, April 30.—After hours of consultation with Mrs. Kern, to whom he went immediately after the convention nominated him for the senatorship Thursday afternoon, John W.
Kern has announced that he will accept the nomination and make the fight for Democratic control of the legislature. He added: "An honor of this kind, unsought, but conferred by the unanimous voice of the representatives of a great party, would be highly appreciated by any man normally constituted, and it is of course greatly appreciated by me."As the party has spoken on this subject with such unanimity and as the senatorial aspirants entered the contest and so cheerfully acquiesced in the result, I assume that the Democratic members of the legislature will feel like carrying out the popular will thus expressed."I do not know that any formal acceptance of the honor is necessary.
Not having sought it, I will not now decline it."Hundreds of telegrams from Democrats in all parts of the country have come to the nominee congratulating him on his nomination. Among them was this from Bryan: "Accept my heartiest congratulations. Success to you. We need you in the senate.—W.
J. Bryan."Governor Harmon of Ohio telegraphed congratulations. "I felicitate both you and the party," he said. "In war the great honor is to be a volunteer, but in peace it is to be drafted."

A COSTLY BLAZE

Coulter Opera House Block at Frankfort Goes Up in Flames.Frankfort, Ind., April 30.—Fire on the third floor of the Coulter Opera House block, following an explosion of gasoline, caused a panic among women and men employed in a tailor shop.
Frank Stare threw himself from a window and was dashed to death on the pavement below. Mrs. Frank Motley threw her pet dog out of the same window, but it escaped serious injury.
The Opera House block was totally destroyed, entailing a loss of more than $80,000.The N. B. Thresher co-operative dry goods store, carrying a stock worth $40,000, is a total loss, not a single thing being saved, so rapidly did the fire spread.The J. C. Miller tailoring establishment's loss is estimated at $12,000.The Otis Miller grocery store carried a stock worth from $7,000 to $9,- 000 and is a total loss.The Cusba bakery is damaged by smoke and water to the extent of $3,- 000.The Opera House block is owned by David A. and William H. Coulter, bankers of this city, and is valued at $20,- 000. The building is a total loss.

Serious Blaze at Marengo.

English, Ind., April 30.—The business part of the town of Marengo, seven miles east of this place, was burned. The loss is estimated at $30,- 000, with little insurance. Sixteen frame business buildings were destroyed.

PREYED ON HIS MIND

Young Relative of the Murdered Carmack Goes Insane.Newman, Ill., April 30.—Cassius Carmack, a relative of the late ex-Senator Edward W. Carmack of Tennessee, who was murdered by the Coopers in Nashville on Nov. 9, 1908, has been adjudged insane in the courts of this county. Young Carmack was suffering from a belief that the Coopers were pursuing him, and since Colonel Duncan Cooper has been pardoned by Governor Patterson, Carmack has been violent. He was sent to an insane hospital.

Says He Was Drunk.

Muncie, Ind., April 30.—Fred Jones, aged twenty-three, a farm employe, is in jail here charged with wounding Mrs. Herbert Wasson of Farmland.
The woman was in an automobile
when Jones opened fire on the machine with a revolver. The young man says he was in a drunken condition when he fired the shots.
